

First Unitarian Church Art Acceptance Policy

Art, at the First Unitarian Church of Wilmington, is defined as an aesthetic object whose function is graceful adornment. All works of art donated to the Wilmington Unitarian Church for permanent display may be received under the following conditions:

- They will enhance the beauty of the grounds or facilities.
- They will reflect a high quality of craftsmanship.
- They will add something to the congregation's spiritual witness.

A donation may also be accepted if it is determined that it can be converted into a worthy cash asset and used to further the congregation's ministry.

Decisions regarding the acceptance of art donations fall under the auspices of the Executive Team. The ET may make its own decision or appoint either a permanent or temporary committee to recommend the acceptance or rejection of such donations.
