Dialogue to Action

Conversations about Racism

Actions to address the issues we face.

Racism affects our community and every person's quality of life. It shows up in inequities between groups and in tensions among people from different ethnic backgrounds. In order to have healthy communities and a strong country, we need to face racism head-on. In a democracy, there must be ways for everyone to have a voice in finding the solutions and in carrying them out. So let's talk.

The Dialogue to Action study circles are six week sessions of 8-12 individuals talking about race and putting solutions for ending racism into action, steered by trained facilitators. They will end with one large Action Forum with all the groups meeting together. The first set of Dialogues will run from February 24 through April 6 with the Action Forum being held on April 14th. Dialogue Circles will be held various dates, times, and places so if interested please e-mail me at rcotto@ywcade.org and we will find the right fit for you.
