Dialogue to Action: Conversations about Racism is a dynamic, eight week program that moves us from talk to meaningful action! You've had conversations about racism before, but this program dives into the real issues and root causes, and evolves into action that directly addresses systemic and institutional racism. Now more than ever, we need to listen to each other, break down the walls between us, and channel our emotions into meaningful action for sustainable change!

The groups will end with a large Action Forum in January 2020.

This is an ongoing program.

In addition to our original program, we are offering a dialogue discussing the book White Fragility: Why it's So Hard for White People to Talk About Racism by Robin DiAngelo.
